ASCO Welcomes New Staff Member

Amanda Miller

Amanda Miller has joined ASCO in the role of Manager of Administrative and Board Services/Executive Assistant. A graduate of the Rutgers University School of Communications, for the past six years she has worked with medical specialty societies and an association management company. Her skills and experience cover a wide range of association functions and activities, including board and committee liaison, executive support, conference planning and budgeting, medical education accreditation, social media marketing, website development and membership database management.