Ketchum Opens Interprofessional Healthcare Center

This summer, Marshall B. Ketchum University opened Ketchum Health, the new home of the University Eye Center, which moved from main campus in Fullerton, Calif., to Anaheim.

Ketchum Health is designed to be the university's interprofessional healthcare center. As it continues to develop, it will include a general medical practice as well as a dispensing pharmacy. Once complete, the new off-campus healthcare center will offer an unparalleled collaborative practice experience for optometry, physician assistant and pharmacy students and expanded healthcare services for the Southern California community.

The new Ketchum Health facility will offer collaborative practice experience for optometry, physician assistant and pharmacy students.